While others of the Egyptlan party were in the North, Vice-Admiral Mohammed Ali Mohammed, Egyptian O.C. Navy, yesterday visited Jerusalem. On his escorted tour, he vialted the Al-Akea Mosque, the Western Wall and nearby arehaeological excavations.

HAIFA. - Israel and Egypt, gradually stepping up their mutual self-reliance, are moving forward - ahead of schedule in the implementation of their peace treaty, while treading more carefully and slowly on the intricate path of Palestinian autonomy.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat now appears confident that his psace initiative will prevail and that by steadfastly fostering the peace between Israel and Egypt, other Arab parties will join them to resolve other aspects of the Middle East conflict.

This emerged from the two-day Haifa summit between Sadat and Premier Menahem Begin, in which the Egyptian leader for the first time took the initiative in announcing a number of agreementa reached here. Moreover, there appears to be increasing coordination between Jerusalem and Cairo with regard to certain outstanding American commitments, such as the satting up of a multi-national peace-keeping force in Sinai.

It was noticed with interest that Washington decided to send special U.S. Middle East envoy Robert Strauss to Israel and Egypt almost immediately following the summit in order to be briefed immediately on the outcome of the Sadat-Begin

The Haifa summit bas further strengthened Sadat'a and Begin's two-tier approach which makes progress on peace between Israsl and Egypt possible despite the still wide and sharp differences on the Palestinian problem and the future Hence the decision to hold regular summit meetings between the Egyptian and Israell leaders while ministera from both sides will continue to confer frequently to find solutions for the more difficult and complicated issues of the Palestinian self-rule acbeme.

Sadat'e public atatements on the Palestinian issue notwithstanding. he is understood to have told Begin that be wants to deal with the subject of autonomy carefully and without. any outside pressures or harassment. The Egyptian leader does not seem to feel an immediate urgency for Palestinians to join the autonomy talka at this atage, as long as arrangements for holding the elections to the administrative council in the adminiatered areas can be agreed upon. Sadat is understood to hold that the real need for Palestinians to join talks will come only after the first three-year period when discussions on the future of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are scheduled to begin. The Egyptian leader feels at the same time that both he and Premler Begin should give some clearer political directives to the cabinet ministers involved in the autonomy talks. But, to do this, Sadat and Begin need more time to bridge at least some of the gaps in principlea that exist between them. However, if Sadat seems willing at present not to exert pressure on apeedier implementation of autonomy, there is no doubt that be does expect concrete results to be reached by next April or May. This marks the end of the one-year period stipulated by the peace treaty for the conclusion of the first phase of the

Sadat's reslistic attitude towards the autonomy negotiations and his readiness to accept some of Israel's demands, such as the aupply of two million tons (14 million barrels) of oll annually from the Alma oil fields after their return to Egypt in two months, have encouraged Begin to view the Haifa summit as a succees. even beyond the original expec-

Moreover, the meeting of minds over broader, regional and global issuee, which Sadat and Begin first explored in Alexandria two months ago, has been further strengthened in Haifa. It appears now that the Israeli-

Israel, Egypt in joint Sinai observer posts

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. - Israel and Egypt yesterday agreed to set up joint military observation poets in the various Sinai huffer zones until an agreement is reached with the U.S. on the establishment of a multi-national ce. Confirming this yesterday to The Jerusalem Post source close to Egyptlan Defence Minister Kamel Hassan Ali stresaed that this new arrangement would be based on the good faith with which hoth Israel and Egypt are implementing the peace treaty.

A more permanent solution to the problem which has been created by the termination of the UN Emergency Forces mandate, will be sought later this month when Israel'a foreign and defence ministers and Egypt'a defence minister are in Washington.

It was this joint observation post agreement that President Anwar Sadat and Premier Menahem Begin had in mind when they told a press conference here yesterday that they had decided "to take matiers into our own bands."

Details of the establishment of the posts will be worked out within the next week in an endesvour to make them operational by the time the Israel and Egyptian ministers go to Washington. The joint posts could conceivably serve as the base for a multi-national, pesce-keeping force involving Israel, Egypt, the U.S. and possibly other Arab nations.

Dayan to raise PLO issue in Bonn talks

By ASHER WALLFISH Post Diplomatic Reporter

HOME NEWS

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan leaves on Sunday for a three-day official visit to Bonn for talks with Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher, who has visited seven Arah eapitals this year on two separato tours.

Genscher returned last week from Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Egypt. Earlier this eummer he went to Libya, Iraq and Saudi Arabla. Dayan is believed anxious to dis-euss the increasing weight that Western Europe appears to be giving to the PLO as representative of the Palestinians; the reluctance of tha European Community to give the Israei-Egypt peace whole-bearted support; and the reasons behind Israel's policy in Southern Lebanon.

Genseher came to Israel last year, and Dayan owed him a return visit. Bonn would probably have invited Dayan earlier were it not for the fact that relations between Israel and West Germany suddenly cooled in the spring this year.

The cause of the chill had nothing to do with Bonn's attitude towards the PLO or the peace with Egypt, The Jerusalem Post was assured Yet, Genscher was believed to be loth to invite Dayan lest Dayan feel constrained to turn the invitation

Genscher sent Dayan an invitation in July, it is understood, and asked him when it would be convenient for him to come to Bonn in the autumn. Dayan sei the date to follow the visit of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, and precede the UN Ganaral Assembly in New York.

The last time Dayan visited Bonn. he blamed the European Economic Community for what be ealisd "msddling in Israel's vital lnterests." He was referring to an EEC resolution on expressing support for Palestinian national rights as well as for Israel's right to exist. The Post's Bonn correspondent, Yael Zarai, adds: Although Genscher has repeatedly stressed that his foreign policy is in accordance with the EEC'e Middle East declaration of June 1977, there are many indications from both his tours in the Middle East this year, that he personally goes far beyond EEC policy on the region.

Genscher has piloted his country'a Middle East policy on a new course. His Liberal party's attitude to Israei has been critical for some time. The FDP's special position in domestic politics also gives it special influence in foreign affairs. Genscher is both party chalrman and foreign

Then, The Post learned, the foreign minister met with Arableaders identified ae helonging to the pro-Hasbemite eamp in the West Bank, in contrast to the less traditional, pro-PLO figures he has talked to in the last fortnight.

The former included Elias Freif. the mayor of Bethlehem, Hikmet al-Masri of Nablus, former chairman of the Jordanian parliament, and Aziz Shebadeb, a prominent Ramalish lawyer. But the sources insist that in hie recent meetings, Dayan bas been careful to talk only to people wbo bold no official position, thus axcluding mayors, for example. Reacting to continuing press coverage about Dayan's meeting last Monday with Palestine National Council member Dr. Ahmed Hamza Naishe and last week'a talk with Dr.

Haidar Abdel-Shafi of Gaza, the Defence Ministry yesterday denied reports that the foreign minister bad asked the IDF to arrange more meetings for him.

Dayan'e meeting with Natshe was beld on the recommendation of Aluf Dani Matt, the IDF's coordinator of operationa in the administered territories who was also present at the two-bour talk in the military government beadquarters in

An official Foreign Ministry announcement yestorday denied reports — attributed to Dayan'e press aide Naftali Lavie — that Israel had transmitted a message to the PLO via Karim Khalaf, the mayor of Ramallah, who is currently visiting the U.S.

In interviews published in yesterday's edition of the East Jerusalem daily "As-Sha'ab," the mayors of Nablus and Hebron, Bassam Shaka and Fahd Kawasma, attackad Dayan's moeting in the administered territories. They accused Israel of trying to create an alternative leadership to the PLO.

Anothor West Bank mayor, generally identified with the more moderate wing of Arab leaders in the territories, told The Post yesterday bs was "convinced" that Dayan was trying to create a basis for official Israeli contacts with the PLO.

And further away, in Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass eald that the foreign minister's meetings were prompted by the PLO's growing influence. But Tass predicted that Dayan's efforts would fall because of the 'hawkish' eharacter of the Likud government.

The Egyptian laader made the announcement at a meeting last night with a group of notables represen-ting Christians, Druse, and Moslems in Haifa and the North.

Sadat said that he has been closely following the news of the Israeli minorities and their suffering, eaying that thay would no longer "be discriminated against" as a result of the peace between Israel and Egypt.

AGREEMENT ON OIL

"Ws have decided to take matters into our own hands," Sadat told newsmen, whila streealng: "Tha Soviets will never stop the peace process ... on the contrary, it (a Soviet UN veto) will give it more momentum.

Sadat and Begin made no secret of their long-standing conflict over the future of East Jorusalem, with the Egyptian emphasizing that his coun-try considers it part of the West Bank and Begin reaffirming that Jerusalem is an indivisible city which remains the capital of Israel.

But even on the sticky East Jerusalem issue, Sadat noted that be did not view the conflict as a crisis. stressing that both he and Begin are expressing their positions and that be is confident these would he bridg-

Sadat went further to say that he and Begin are in agreement over a number of points with regard to Jerusalem. He elted the non-partition of the city as an example. "I bave expressed my views to Premier Begin and be expressed his views to me. We need more tims and more careful study and this is quite natural," Sadat said. "Jerusalem is the capital of Israel," said Begin, appearing fatigued and his voice hourse. "It is an indivisible city and there is completely free access to the religious shrines there. This is my point of view, which is supported by almost every citizen in Israel and on this indeed we differ." The Egyptian leader made clear that the East Jerusalsm issue is not the only aspect in the West Bank and Gaza Strip autonomy talks on which be differs with Begin. While conceding to an Egyptian reporter that be bad achieved no progress on the autonomy in the talks bere, Sadat said that the subject needs further negotiations "and etudies." Sadat at one stage appeared to have backed down on his pledge that an agreement on both autonomy and East Jorusalem would be reached by the end of this year, telling one newsman that he is confident "a great leap would be achieved by then if an agreement is not finalized. Sadat said that he remains optimistic with regard to settling all outstanding conflicts, adding that "a great achievement has been accomplished in such a short time" since his trip to Jerusalem two years

There bas been a change in the course of history," Sadat said. He added that negotiations between Egypt and Israel will continue persistently on all levels - including summita and ministerial con-

The Egyptian leader diamissed a queation on whether be is indeed pursuing the return of his own land rather than genuine peace, saying that his presence bere is aimed at reasserting his intentions of goodwill - not for the return of land, nor for the resolution of the issues of peacekeeping in Sinai or that of oil, "which were colved between me and my dear friend Premier Begin within minutes."

Sadat reminded the questioners that be bad "fulfilled all the pledgee" be mads on his peace voyage to Jerusalsm, including the signing of the peacs treaty, the extension of security to Israel, "and that the October war will be the last of wars."

But, in answering another question," Sadat clearly warned that his part in the peace doal was laying "a cornerstone" for peace rather than promising it. He said that what Israel and Egypt had agreed on at Camp David was a framework for comprehensive settlement in the Middle East, not a separate peace between the two countries. He cautioned that the Palestinian question is "the core and beart" of the overall Middle East conflict, and that that problem would have to be tackled before a lasting peace could be accomplished. He said be had no doubt that he and Begin will be addressing themselvoe to it, adding that he is also confident that other Arab parties will join them in tha pursuit of a peaceful solution "soon, insha'allah.

Little interest in territories over happenings in Haifa

By IAN BLACK Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Haifa summit meeting between Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menahem Begin has provoked little public intereet in the adminiatered territories, Political figures have merely relterated their view that autonomy is unacceptable to the Palastinians.

Apart from a sbort-lived demonstration yesterday by youngstors in Ramallah — quickly dispersed by security forces - there has been no trouble. On Tuesday, tho military authorities prevented a number of public figures from attending an anti-Sadat protest meeting in East Jerusalem.

Mayore and other prominent figures interviewed by The Jerusalem Post in the last two days have insisted that they are opposed to the Egyptlan-Ieraeli poaco process as long as Israel continues to rule the Wast Bank, East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip. Only the PLO can represent us, they say.

Habron Mayor Fahd Kawasma said yesterday that Sadat's peace initiative "got off on the wrong foot" because it ignored the rights of the Palestinians. He was interviewed in the Israeli Arabic daily "Al-Anba." In another interview with the same paper, Beit Jalla Mayor Farah ai-Araj said that there was no contradiction between Sadat's policy and the position of the PLO and the Arab rejectionists. He said he was sure that Egypt could realize the rights of the Palestinians.

Gaza Mayor Rashad a-Shawwa told "Al-Anha" in an interview published on Tuesday that Sadat's initiative had furthered the Palestinian cause by helping to improve the status of the PLO. The three Arabic papers in East

Jerusalem all devote their editorials today to the Haifa summit. The largest and most influential of them, "Al-Quds." says that the meeting has been a "net gain" for Israel: This, the paper argues, is because

Israel has secured Egyptian agree-ment over oil, Sinal peacekeeping and normalization, while Sadat has achieved nothing on autonomy or East Jerusalem. "Al-Fajr" believes that it will be ecessary to convene another Camp David-style summit to be bring the partles closer together, but, it cautions that Sadat will always face Ieraeli "rajeotioniem" on the autonomy question.

The pro-PLO "Al-Sha'ab" warns that those who believe that Sadat is trying to belp the Palastinians should remember that the Egyptian leader said publicly after Camp David that he, like Carter and Begin, was opposed to the creation of an independent Palestinian state.

'Colour TV not before late 1982

By SHLOMO MAOZ Post Economic Reporter

The full operation of colour television in Israel should be held off until the second balf of 1982, but its in troduction should not be halted, senior Treasury men agreed yester. day at a meeting with Finance Minister Ehrlich.

It is quite natural that there should be colour television broadcasting in Israel, said Ehrlich. But, on the other hand, the economy must not be damaged.

Treasury Director-General Amiram Sivan said colour broadcasts must be introduced gradually so that colour sets are bought only as people replace their old sets, or as newly established families buy their first sets. He firmly opposed any move that would produce a sudden fashion for two sets per family, comething that would cost the economy about $400m.

The Treasury estimates that there are 525,000 TV sets in the country at present. Were their owners all to go out and buy colour sets, this would result in a 4 per cent growth in private consumption, equivalent to II.4b., with serious consequences for the halance of payments and possible barmful effects on private savings.

Some Treasury men suggested raising taxes on colour sets, but the State Revenue head Uriel Lynn re-jected the suggestion as unlikely to put a brake on the acquisition of sets, and likely to increase the temptation to smugglers.

It eeeme likely that the question of eolour broadcasting will soon come up before a eahinet meeting, perhaps on the suggestion of Com-munications Minister Moda'i who favours the idea. Deputy Premier

Jerusalem Past Reporter .The Beduin of Bosmat Tivon yesterday welcomed Egypt's First Lady, Jehan Sadat in the finest tradizon of Arab hospitality. At the ultra-modern nursery school, the well-equipped Tipat Halay mother and child care centre, at the home of the town's mayor, she was showered with gifts, hugs, kisses and compliments. Mrs. Sadat was accompanied by the prime minister'e wife, Aliza Begin, who was also cheered by the flag-

But, he told The Jerusalem Post, only in Bosmat Tivon could be guarantee that the first lady would be graciously received. Most of the Galilee's other minority villages are considered politically radical while the Beduin settlement is known for its pro-government eentiments.

of the 18 settlements established in Galilee for the Beduin. The village boasts six medical students and a high percentage of educated women, who, unlike their

Many village males serve in the security forces and the merchant marine. The bouses are large and well-cared for, the streets are wide and paved, and there is a full network of functioning community services.

also not that keen to raise purchase taxes on care. The Treasury argues that taxes on cars are already so high that a further rise will bring about no appreciable eavinge in foreign currency. Higher taxes would also mean lower sales and a commensurate drop in Tressury

Higher purchase taxes for ears also go against the recommen-dations of the committee chaired by former deputy finance minister Yebezkel Flomin. That committee recommended a gradual decrease in purchase tax for cars. The Treasury also argues that pegging rates of purchase tax on engine capacity is not justified since exercit ears with large enginee but relatively low fuel consumption bave been developed recently in the world.

K. Shmona MDA station may close 'any day'

By ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The Magen David Adom station in Kiryat Shmona may he forced to close down any day. Mayor Avraham Allony told The Jerusalem Posi earlier this week. Allony, who is also chairman of the station'e management board, said that besides serving Kiryat Shmona, which has no hospital, the station also covers the Golan Heights, Upper Galilee and Southern Lebanon. "Magen David is the most vital service in town. The nearest bospital is in Safad, 45 minutes away. If the station closes, we are totally un-protected," Allony said.

Mcanwhile, Dr. Avi Ellencweig, personal adviser to Health Minister Shostak and the official responsible for the ministry's dealings with MDA, has left the country until the end of October. MDA officials said that they have not been informed of his replacement, if there is one. Three weeks ago, Ellencwelg assumed personal responsibility for keeping the MDA Holon branch open, but never met anyone connceted with the branch before leaving the country. The Holon braneb shut down on Sunday. The Kiryat Shmona station has already stopped using three of its eight ambulances in an effort to cut costs. Even so, it has accumulated debts over ILim., while IL75,000 le owed the local petrol etation for fuel. "Our petroi bill averages IL25,000 a montb." etation manager Shmuci Moyal eald. "We haven't paid for the iast three months, and the petrol station has said that it cannot extend our credit any longer. We are literally begging them to give us fuel to keep the ambulaneee going."

Allony said that his appeals to the Health Ministry to keep the etation open had fallen on deaf eare. 'They told me to apply to MDA headquartere. They know as well as I do that headquarters is bagging the ministry for money."

Apart from Holon, MDA etations bave already closed in Beersbeba and Binyamina. Eight other stations have announced that they are on the verge of shutting down. At Ashdod, the management announced that the station will close next Monday if no aid ie forthcoming by then. The other stations in a critical situation are in Tel Aviv, Haifa, Netanya, Rehovot, Tiberias, Dimona and Afula.

One MDA official yesterday told The Post that the whole organization was "failing apart before the very cyce of the Health Ministry and they are content to ace this happen without doing anything." He said that hundrede of thousands of people are already without emergency services. "It will take a tragedy to wake Shostak up, and that tragedy could happen any day," the officials said.

Rener claims that the Committee has no document proving that Seidel received the sum, so he cannot show proof to the Histadrut. Rener says Seldel answered his lotter saying: 'I've discussed the matter with Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich, who told me that you talked to him too, and we can talk together about lt. Mountbatten buried as he wanted to be

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI). - Earl Mountbatten of Burma, who came unscathed through battles on land and sea only to die by an IRA bomb, was burisd yesterday as he wanted to be - with flags flying, bands playing, and London filled with the spectacular pageantry that no other country does better.

He did not see it as a sad occasion when he recorded a spoken obituary two years ago that summarized one of the most remarkable lives of our tims - a dazzling war hero at sea. supreme ailied commander ln Southeast Asia in World War II, the last viceroy of India and enough more for a dozen adventure novels.

And in a curious way it-wasn't sad. though his children and grandchildren were moist-eyed at the funeral services in Westminster Abbey and his cousin and nephew, Queen Elizabeth and her husband Prince Philip, looked as unhappy as anyone has ever seen them appear in

One reason was that most of the many thousands lining the route from St. James's Palane, where the coffin rested overnight, to the ancient abbey knew that Lord Louis was unafraid of death and that he had meticulously planned this very funeral years ago.

On the theory that people who would plant a bomb in the boliday motorboat of a 79-year-old man - as the IRA boasted it did in Mountbatten's at Mullaghmore, off tha Irish coast, 10 days ago — would stop at nothing, Scotland Yard turned the centre of London into an armed

Some 4,000 polics, armed detectives and terrorist specialists searched sewers, parked cars and buildings overlooking the funeral coute and sharpshooters on rooftops scanned the scene with binoculars.

In mld-morning of a lovely September day, hundreds of tall guardsmen, in crimson jackets and bearskin hats, lined the streets. A blare of trumpets, a roll of drums, and the coffin was carried from the old redbrick palace of King Henry

Islamic Guards take charge in Mahabad

MAHABAD, Iran (Reuter). - In what was the Kurdish rebel capital of Mahabad, Islamic Guards now occupy the former beadquarters of the insurgents, the local offices of the banned Kurdish Democratic Party

Up the road the Iranian Army's oid U.S. M-47 tanks guard the entrance to the town'e barracks, abandoned in haste by Kurdish guerrillas who fled towards the Iraql border.

According to Iranian officials. bout one-quarter of the town fled before the advancing government troops. Eyewitnesses spoke of a panic-stricken stream of women and children setting off with heavily armed men on the road to the last Kurdish outpost around Sardasht last Monday.

The occupation of Mahabad capital of the abort-lived Kurdish republic after the end of World War II - appears to have broken the back of the Kurdish resistance.

The Kurdieh guerrillas are trapped with their backs to the Iraql border in a mountain fastness. Their only communications with the rest of Iran are by radio-telephone and all supplies from the Iranian side have been cut off.

Army officers here estimate 50,000 armed men are holed up in Sardasht. the wine-capital of pre-revolutionary Iran, together with a flood of civilian refugees.

The military say they have not yet received any order to advance on Sardasht but what seems to await the guerrillas are the same methods which brought about the fall of the previous Kurdish strongholds — Phantom jets repeatedly breaking the sound barrier to intimidate the population and belicopter gunships firing rockets and machinegums at guerrilla positions.

In Mahabad, the end of ths rebellion has brought Islamic ruls to the town. Leftist party headquarters have been closed and some of their members arrested, according to Revolutionary Guards.

Abu Sharif, the battle name for the head of the Revolutionary Guards, rode through the town accompanied by several armed men.

civilians looked on silently. The troops which spearhed capture of the town seeme quite convinced that the guards should not stay in Mahabad. "It is bette that the guards should not stay an we should stay here alone. The reo-ple do not want the guards," in of-ficer said. But the Islamic Guardsman stationed on the jout-akirts of the town are determined to remain and impose the strict laws of the Islamie Republic.

For them it is also essential that the roving executioner of Kurdleh rebels. Ayatollah Sadeo Khalkhali should come here.

For the past few nights the television has shown naws film of Khalkhall holding trials in other Kurdish areas. Worried looking Kurds watched the programmes, sadly shaking their heads. Vietnam said beefing up Cambodia

BANGKOK. - The Englishianguage "Bangkok Post" reported yesterday that Vietnam has sent three more combat divisions into Cambodia, boosting its force there to about 200,000 men.

But reliable sources in Bangkok's Indocbina-watching community could not confirm the report and said there have in fact been indications that the Vietnamese troop strength had been reduced.

The sources said the difficulty of operating during the current rainy season may have prompted Hanoi to pull out some of its soidlers and thus lessen the hurden of maintaining a iarge military presence in Cam-

However, these and other analysts do not rule out a major Vietnamese offensive against the remnants of toppled Premier Poi Pot's army once the rains cease later in the year. Vietnam failed to wipe out the guerrillas in western Cambodia and in other pockets throughout the country earlier this year.

Estimates of Vletnamese troop strength in Cambodia have varied between 180,000 and 170,000 in the past few months, with analysts noting that the rotation of troops in and out of the country makes it difficult to give exact figures.

In a related devslopment, Vietnam yesterday described the situation on its northern border with China as 'very serious.'

The official Radio Hanoi, monitored in Bangkok, said China still had 12 divisions and six army corps, probably totalling more than 400,000 men, concentrated near the Vietnamese border. Vietnam says China used more than 500,000 troops in its invasion of nortbern Vietnamese border provinces last February at the start of a one-month war between the two communist neighbours.

The two sides have held 11 sessions of talks since the war aimed at restoring normal relations, but appear to have made no progress. Peking is demanding that Vietnam withdraw its troops from Cambodia while Hanol has said the demand is irrelevant to the dispute between Vietnam and China. (AP, Reuter)

'Slush funds' in Pretoria court

PRETORIA (Reuter). — Dr. Eschel Rhoodie, alieged mastermind behind South Africa's "siush funds" scapdal, made his second brief court appearance in the Pretoria Supreme Court yesterday. The former information secretary, extradited from France last month, faces charges of traud or theft.

Yesterday's hearing lasted only a few minutes and the case was postponed until September 21. Rhoodle was not asked to plead and no application for ball was made.

It is alleged that Rhoodie misappropriated 83,250 rand (about IL2.6m.) in secret South African government funds.

In a related development, heart transplant pioneer Christiaan Bar-nard has been told he can no longer take leave from bis bospital whenever he wants to travel the world as an unofficial ambassador for South Africa.

Barnard has admitted receiving certain funds from the now disbanded information department. - centre of the "slush funds" scandal, to help meet his expenses for international travel.

After Barnard publicly called for an open trial for Rhoodle, Justice and Interior Minister Alwyn Schlebusch described the surgeon as 'arrogant, confused and boring."

The director of hospital services for Cape Province, Dr. R.L.M. Kotze, said Tuesday night that he had issued the instruction regarding Barnard's leavs in order to regularize his working conditions at Groote Schuur Hospital hare, where the surgeon performed the world's first human heart transpiant in December 1967.

"It is simply a ease of giving him the same treatment as any other member of staff," Kotze eaid. But newspaper reports indicated the order might have been instigated by Schiebusch.

Meanwhile, at the UN on Tuesday, ths U.S. called on the international community to give special support to "the liberation movements recognized by the Organiztion of African Unity" in southern Africa.

U.S. delegate David Cardwell told the preparatory committee for the World Conference of the UN Decade for Women that those organizations have a special role and deserve special support. However, this should not imply exclusion of support for other isgitimate resistance and bumanitarian organizations in Southern Africa."

The OAU recognizes the Patriotic Front in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, the South-Wast Africa Peoples Organization in South-West Africa and two movements, the African National Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress, in South Africa.

Japan weeps for Lan Lan the panda

TOKYO (AP). - A seemingly endless procession of young and old, some with black armbands, many wseping, visited Tokyo's Ueno Zoo yesterday to mourn Lan Lan, the 11-year-old female panda who died on Tuesday.

The visitors offered fruit, flowers and a variety of gifts, messages of condolence and prayers. Some of the children carried panda dolls in their arms or on their backs, papoose fashion.

In the cage next to Lan Lan's, her 2-year-old mate, Kang Kang. ianguished alone. Occasionally he rose on his haunches and tried to peer into the empty enclosure. "Kang Kang is apparently aware that Lan Lan is gone," said a sorrow-ful zoo official. "He refuses to touch

When Toto arrived in London officials of the Department of the Environment ordered her to be taken off the flight from Vienna to Tokyo. Toto, as a lowland Camaroon gorilla. belongs to what is officially dssignated as an endangered species.

The officials feared she might be being amuggled illegally from her West African bifthplace in Cameroon via Vienna and London to Japan. The convention on international trade in endangered species bans the commercial sais of gorillas.

DIAMOND smuggling in the country has had a great effect on the economy. In the past the authorities have blamed foreignere for the traffic and many of them were expelled from the country.

Dilemma for defector

By CHRIS MORGENSSON/Stockholm

THE GIANT Swedlab Metal Workers' Union has given its support to Soviet defector Valentin Agapov's lone fight to persuade Russia to let his wife, daughter and mother join

The union, with about balf a million members, has frozen lts relations with the Sovet Union until the Agapov case is resolved. "We can't have trade union contacts with people we cannot trust," says union leader Stig Malm.

Malm and the union'e international secretary, Bengt Jakobsson, made representations on Agapov'e behalf during an official trade union visit to Moscow last October end were promised that Agapov's family would be granted

Malm says they were told the three women would be allowed to icave either at the end of 1978 or early in 1979. The information came through Nikolal Dragunov, chairman of the Car and Tractor Workers'. Union, and Gennadij Korznikov, the union's international secretary, eaid Malm, Both the Russiens later denied that any such assurance had been given.

In a letter to Dragunov and Korznikov, Maim says: "We are disappointed that we cannot depend on

The unions action is the latest move in Agapone battle with Soviet bureaucracy which his methods have ranged from the breathtakingly daring — a friend flew a light plane into Russia in an abortive bid to pick up the family - to the bizarre, with Agapov threatening to Embassy in Stockholm.

BECAUSE of the personal nature of this struggle, the dissidents of the Helsinki Group inside Russia are unwilling to give their backing. "The Agepovs are interested only in themselves," said one dissident in Moscow. "They don't care about the wider issues of civil rights."

The judgement is not without foundation, Valentin Agapov, as far as one can gather, is not politically motivated. But ln many ways this only goes to make his case more deserving. He is not out to prove anything — he just wants to be reunited with his family, His long, hitter battle started on November 15, 1974. He was one of a party of Soviet seamen who stopped to look at a football match on television in a shop window in the west coast port of Helsingborg. Agapov and a friend stayed watching while

In April last year, Swedes Carl-Goran Wickenbergh and Per-Gunnar Nystrom flew a two-seater plane into Russia in a bid to smuggle out the three women. They landed on a frozen lake but falled to make contact and flew back to Finland where they were tried on a charge of violating Finnish alrapace and deported.

Since then, Agapov bas tried more conventional ways to do battle. At almost every Soviet event in Sweden be protests, pathetically draped with placards, and has written to U.S. President Jimmy Carter and 50 U.S.

Reaching this living standard can seidom be achieved by women, for, although men and women have equal rights under West German law, women's salariee are still generally emailer than men'e.

This state of affairs will certainly change as more women go out to work. There are already growing numbers of women among the ranks of doctors, lawyers, psychologists and social workers.

MOST IMPORTANT, the holy of holies, Bonn'e political ecene, la also undergoing a transformation that would have been unthinkable a few years ago: It is slowly being invaded by women who are taking their piace in parliament, in key government jobe (Dr. Hamm-Bruecher, state secretary for foreign affairs, is a woman), in the unions and in the hierarchies of the major parties.

The most dramatic example of female upward mobility in West German politics is Mrs. Anne-Marie Renger, who was president of the parliament and, thus, second in importance only to the state president. Renger le now vice-president of the parliament and was in May the Social Democratic Party's candidate for the state presidency.

"In the last few years." says Renger, "women bave changed the political facs of Bonn. We are still a minority, but without us the political world would be very dry and cold. Reason and logic are dear to the German mind and reason bas it that if Margaret Thatcher can lead Britain, if Simone Vell can preside over the European Parliament, a woman chancellor in West Germany la not eo improbable.

Bonn women are aware of the many obstacies they face on the road to full equality; they know that many citizens are still conservative and family-minded, but they also know that there is no return to their previous roie and they are proceeding quietly and surely.

was mainly because be was on the track of this dossier that the lawyer Giorgio Ambrosoli, the liquidator of Banca Privata, was brutally gunned down in Milan in mld-July by professional killers believed to bave been recruited from Mafia circles in the U.S. expressly for the purpose. According to press renorts. Am-brosoli had succeeded in acquiring 43 per cent of the shares of Amincor from ite voluntary liquidator, regarded as a "front" man for Sindona, in return for immunity from procecution and a cancellation of personal debts involving the bank. Ambrosoll was eald to be aiming to obtain 51 per cent controi, which would have given him access to the dossler and its closely guarded secrets. Some sources say it was already in hie poseesslon wben he was murdered.

If the parliamentary enquiry gets under way soon, the Sindona serial story should be about to add some more exciting and possibly quite dramatic chapters. Italians ehould be kept in suspense for some while to come, in eager expectation that et least some of the 500 names may come to light.

But the real meat of the eaga will be exposed if the dossier disciosing all Sindona's global wheelings and dealings — where they were carried on, who aided and abetted them, who benefited from them, and eo on come to light. That should be able to count on international best-seller readership. It all depends what, if anything, comes out of those two Swiss banks, in Zurich and Geneva. (Observer Foreign News Service)

ESCAPE TO ATHENA: Starring Reger Moore, Telly Savaias, David Niven, Stefanie Powers, Claudia Cardinale, Bichard Houndtree, Sonny Bone and Elliot Gould. Directed by George Pan Commiss.

WAR IS heli - of that there can bs no question, but within the inferno there can he some very funny moments. 'Stalag 17' and 'M.A.S.H.' provided adequats demonstrations of the situations of black humour that men and women at war either create or find themselves in. "Escape to Athena" is a star-studded attempt to produce the definitive war film with a grin.

Set in a luxurious prisoner of war camp on a Greek island, the film focuses on a group of PoWs imported there because of their special fitness for digging up art treasures. They are supervised by Major Otto Hecht (Rogsr Moore), a debonaire, sympathetic, knowledgeable purveyor of Greek antiquities - hence his assignment to run the camp, His loyalty to the Reich is limited and does not prevent him from caching considerable loot for himself. He also has an eys for the occasional female prisoner who comes his way and taste enough to provide such "gueets" with deluxe quarters, lobster dinners and well-selected Bordeaux wines.

His collection of prisoners, aware of his weaknesses, do not hesitate to take advantage of them. Professor Blake (David Niven) enjoys escsping from time to time; Bruno Totalli (Sonny Bono) is an Italian-American cook who specializee in what he calis Socrates' Revenge"; Nat Judson (Richard Roundtree) is a black sergeant who snjoys cracking Ger-man skulls together; and there is a pair of American USO comedians (Elliot Gould and Stefanie Powers) who know how to make the very best of everything.

Life and the film go on enter-tainingly at the camp. There is even a very funny walk-on by William Holden as a leftover from "Stalag 17" to add to the senss of parody and

THE FILM runs Into trouble, however, hecause there is a parallel story, which is not so amusing. Zeno (Telly Savalas), a priest defrocked because of his affair with Eleana (Claudia Cardinale), is in charge of the Greek Resistance forces on the island. He has set up Eleana and a group of giris in a bordello to tap information from the German occupiers, but things have not gone too smoothly, and a group of the Islanders are scheduled to he ex-ecuted by the Nazis. Zeno, working with the PoWs, eets up a plan to take over the island, and there are some lood in the town square. Elther story might have made an adequate film, but the combination spoils it. The genulnely funny moments are made to seem distasteful by the real grotesqueness of war, and eltuations that could have provided moments of tension are harmed, because one never knows whether there is a punch-line to follow or not.

gruesoms battles and lots of epilled

Casting is also somewhat problematic. One has trouble erceiving Telly Savalas as anything hut Kojak; Roger Moore comes across as the suave Saint rather than as a semi-sinister German; Elliot

Gould seems left over from "Bob and Caroi and Ted and Alice"; Sonny Bono looks lonely without Cher: and Richard Roundtree seems amazingly like Shaft in a sergeant's uniform. David Niven, it is true, fits in beautifully, but Dsvid Niven fits in beautifully no matter what he does. Filmed entirely on Rhodes, the scenic shots are breathtaking. The lovely Mcditerranean, the magnificent monasteries, the charm of the towns, the quality of the local cuisine and even the local bordello make one pine for s trip sbroad. The film also makes one pine, _____ is difficult to say. DAVID GEORGE makes one pine, but for exactly what

DAYS OF HEAVEN Starring Richard Gere, Brooke Adams, Sam Shepard and Linda Manz. Written and directed by

THE VISUAL splendour of young Terrence Mallck's second feature film is so overpowering that human misery and poverty become luminous, gold-framed lcons begging for our adoration, not our sympathy.

Time has heen slowed down perceptibly. We are caught up in the langorous, sustained rhythme of rural pre-World War I America. The year is 1916. Three migrant workers, children of immigrants, Bill (Richard Gere), his little sister Linda (Linda Manz), and his girifriend Ahby (Brooke Adams), hop a train to the Texas psnhandle, eager to escape the poverty of their Chicago

Like the other hopefuls who believe in Horace Greeley's 19th century injunction. "Go West, young man, go West," these three vagabonds arrive with a satchel full of dreams.

They are among the lucky hired to plant and harvest wheat for s vealthy, young Texas farmer who lives alone in a huge Victorian home rising up like eome exotic mushroom in the middle of the vast, flat prairis. From eunrise to sunset, their tiny figures toli in the amber and ochre fields, which stretch out endlessly, romantically, against an immense blue heeven. Reaching back to America's rural history for his in-spiration, Director Malick has recreated that period with unparalleled lyricism, summed up in the stunning 70mm. cinematography of Nestor Almendros (with additional photography by Haskell almost biblics in form.

THE STORY Itself is a simple one,

When Bill overhears that the young farmer (Sam Shepard) is suffering from a fatal disease, he per-suades his girlfriend — whom until then he has passed off as bls sieter to marry the farmer, hoping to lsy claim to his fortune when he dies. (Remember how our Jewish patriarch Abraham passed off his wife Sarah as his eister to eave their lives?)

For s while, after the wedding, all four enjoy the careless, carefree 'days of heaven,' as little sister Linda narrates to us in her offhand nasal patter. But, as in all morality tales, the sinner must pay the price for his deceit.

Apocalypse is forthcoming, but the human story is dwarfed by the visual grandeur — both the greatest strength and greatest weakness of the film. The lasting effect is sensory, rather than emotional, but that is reason enough to see and celebrate this remarkable film.

WONDERFUL MEN WITH A CEANK. Starring Rudolf Hrusinsky, Jiri Menzei, Blazena Hollsova, Vlasta Fabianova. Directed by Jiri Menzel

IN THE director's own words this film is a loving tribute not only to the ploneers of the Czech film industry.

but also to cinema Itself. During the ehooting, we found ourselves carried hack to the magical world of the beginning of the clnematography," Jiri Menzel recalls. "when film dld not need words, at a time when one man was shooting, not for money or giory, but for the pleasure of giving life to photographs." In a totally original cinematic style and colour technique — unlike the work of any other contemporary director — Jirl Ménzel sings s hymn to the moving picture, and we cannot heip hut sing with him.

His narrative takes us through Bohemis with Mr. Pasparte and bis daughter, who, not unlike a traveliing road show, make their living hy showing "enlivened pictures" to the elmple folk who live in unnamed towns and hamlets along the way.

In Prague, they are joined by the lovely Aloisie, the daughter of Pasparte's deceased friend. She becomes the housekeepsr of young photographer Kolensty (played by director Menzel), who is the per-sonification of the dedicated artist, living only for his art.

While Kolensty dreams of making his own films, the rich widow Evanie dreams of marrying Pasparte, and Pasparte dreams of setting up his own little cinema with the money of the rich widow Evanie.

This makes for a three-cornered, deft little plot indeed, and it sttains universality by examining human nature on the tiniest of scales. Here in the backroads of Bohemia and in the elegant suburbs of Prague, life blurs into film and film into life.

Menzel's remarkable story-withlna-story allegory is further enhanced by the special colour technique he has perfected — draining the primary colours from the technicolour — rendering entirely new chiaroscuro tones with muted

Until now Menzel has been best known for his 1966 film "Closely Watched Trains." "Wonderful Men" is sure to become a classic, taking a weli-deserved place in the "Hall of Cinematic Love poems." As Truf-faut in "Day for Night" and Fellini in '84' have tenderly demonstrated, cinema has a will and deeire of its own, leaving traces of immortality long after the filmmaker has packed up his camera sent the crew and artists home.

AN HOUR before dawn the religious man who owns the pita hakery on a small alley opposite Jerusalem's Mshane Yehuda market uses a large key to unlock the grated doors of his estabilshment. The worn stairs leading into the

Two Arabs duck into the bakery, and while one readles coffee, the other checks the dough, which was prepared the night before. Soon they will be at work, cutting, pounding, smoothing and toesing the moist white dough. And eoon after the first bails begin their ride through the oven and into wooden bins as old as the oven Itself, the delivery boys will start appearing.

The delivery boys are not yet in their teens. Most are Arahs, though together outside the factory, smoking clgarettes and spitting, and though they have the hodles of children, in their eyes is comething adult and wise and - to the stranger - perhaps bltter.

THESE BOYS probably have seen everything that can be seen in Jeruselem. Some even claim to remember hombings that occurred hefore they were born. Others say they have already been in fall.

They are also the kind of klds that middle-class children briefly envy for they always have some coins in their pocket for candy or a movie ticket or cigarettee, and seem to be One has to remind oneself they are

AS SOON AS their trays ars full, they halance them on their carts or on their heads. They move through the crowded alley with determination, tongues stuck out or curled around an upper lip, one hand halancing while the other holds tight to ths edge of the tray.

They take mincing steps, not strides. The tray's shade drops acroes their flour-smeared faces, revealing the tiny rivulets of sweat. The bakery is in a religious neighbourhood. Like the Arab boys, the yeshlva pupils with twisted earlocks and heavy black coats have

The religious boys look away when their eyee are caught by the eyes of the delivery boys.

Once the wooden bin Is full with the bread so hot it cannot be handled, the boys lift the trave that often must weigh more than tham, and put them on Iron carts with tiny wheels, which they run through the market or into the city, controlling the epeed by using an old motorecooter tire as a brake. The tire hangs in the rear of the cart begins to get out of control, the hoys stand on the tires, slowing the vehicle. Their deliveries made, they run back to the bakery to wait for a new bin of bread. Only rarely can they be seen eating one of the pitot.

THE WORK continues until dusk, The boys collect their pay from the baker, who has sat inside the factory behind an old wooden desk all day. He pays them with crumpled hills and little sacks of coins, which he has collected throughout the day. He has heen reading Talmud as the day progressed, and the boys know the day is over when he closes the last hook on his desk. The two Arabs leave the bakery with the religious man, who takes out the padlock and the chin, and locks up. Later, after the echoes and shouts of the delivery boys have faded awsy, and the clank of the conveyor belt is gone from the alley, a new sound slipe into the narrow road. It is the sound of the cardplayers at the club across the street.

The cardplayers drink cornac as they play. Only club members may join. They duck into a doorway that during the day appears permanently closed. But at night the door opens to a lighted courtyard.

Upstairs the card players don't make too much noise, but they can he heard until late at night. And then, shortly before the bakery owner appears to unlock the pita factory, the club closes, and the members trickle out.

Banks offer 25% grant to depositors

Savings scheme war

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The country's banks are engaged in a "savings scheme" war. The first round started earlier this week when the First International Bank, without coordinating its scheme with the other banks, suddenly announced that It was increasing from 14 to 24 per cent the grant It would give to anyons depositing up to IL90,000 for six years. First International, however, set September 17 as the deadline.

The next day, the other banks in the country, led by the three largest networks, Leumi, Hapoalim. and Discount, announced that they were offering a 25 per cent grant. They also limited the time for joining until September 17.

First International then stated it was raising its grant to 25 per cent. the same as the other banke, and went one step further — it was extending its deadline for joining until the last day of September.

The other banks have announced that they are considering extending the deadline - but have not mads any firm announcement when registration for their programme would end, if indeed the time limit was extended.

According to banking circles, the schemes, which are now identical, except for the time limit, provide that anyone "breaking" the echeme, that is to say, demanding his money back before the end of the six yeare, will lose the entire grant. Moreover, since the schemes also pay three per cent unlinked interest on the principal deposited, income taxes would be deducted from anyone withdrawing bis money in the first three years of the echeme. However, several banks noted that "the number withdrawing from the schemes is very small."

Although the 25 per cent grant seems to be a large sum, the hanks admit that this grant, spread over a period of six years, together with the Figures issued this week by the Bank of Israel show that in May the rate of defaulting on cheques, promissory notes and credit notes jumped to 0,2 per cent, the highest for at least two years. This too is an indication of the wey in which infla-tion is making it difficult for both companies and individuals to cover their dehts. In one example cited hy the bank, 118 people failed to honour promissory notes of IL15,000 or more in May, a figure higher than any for the past two years.

But infletion is evidently not causing people to curtail their purchasee; they are, in fact, buying more. The Central Bureau of Statistics reports that new car sales went up in the first four months of 1978 by 42 per cent as against the same period last year, to stand at 18,300. Other figures show that this trend is still continuing today.

Israelis also bought 66,250 new television eets in this period, up by 48 per cent. But there was a drop of 3 per cent in the number of washing mechines soid - only 25,430.

NEW YORK (AP). - Gold prices are soaring again, and whils experts won't speculate how long the hoom will last, they do say the force that eventually will toppie it could be one of the factors that is pushing prices up - the troubled U.S. economy.

Since the beginning of the year the price of an ounce of gold has risen almost $100 U.S. — $40 of that in the four-week rusb that began August 8. On Tuesday, gold closed in Zurich at a record $325.625 a troy ounce, up $2.75 from Monday's Isvel.

How U.S. economy may affect the price of gold - either way

Americans feel the rising price of gold most directly when they purchase gold jewelry or go to the dentist for a gold filling. But gold is also used in a wide variety of industrial applications. Higher prices in those areas will eventually maks their way to the consumer level.

Analysts aald Tuesday that political and economic uncertainty were the factors behind the yellow metal'a surge. Gold traditionally is considered a safe haven for Investors wheo the currencles they invest in - especially the dollar - are being huffeted.

'One could think of the gold price as helng a harometer, an index, of worldwide anxietles about politica and the economy." eald Jeffrey Nichols, an analyst at Argus Research Corp. "There's a good deal of anxiety in the marketplace."

The anxiety centres on worries about recession in the U.S. and inflation there and abroad, caused to a large measure by this year's steep rise in oil prices. Gold prices are also being bolstered by massive purchases of the metal by nations with large amounts of money to invest. These include members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, who have lots of casb hecause of riging oll prices.

"I think they're buying gold for the simple desire to make money," eaid James Sinclair, a New York invest-ment adviser. "Making money is their hobby." But the advantages gold gains from U.S. economic woes could he shori-lived, according to Nichols. As the nation's economy slowe down, ao will inflation, he said. When inflation begins to moderate, interest in the dollar will build again, and investors will start switching their holdings from gold into the U.S. currency. Nicbols said the slowing of the in-flationary spiral "will be perceived as good - hut had for the gold

As to when that will happen and gold prices will hegin to fall, though, Nichols is loathe to guess.

"I've been saying for six months that it was about over and I've been wrong every time," he said.

"We remain confident the price will go up substantially in the next few months. There remains a tremendous buildup in demand," a London dealer sald. "Many experts think the price is already too high.

but the buyers are taking no notice of such views," he added. A London mining expert said be suspects "the price will hit $390 within a couple of months, if not before." Dealers expect immediate beavy demand from the industrial and jewelry sectors.

The West German Dresdner Bank'e recent purchase for $217m. of 96 per cent of the gold offered at the iast U.S. Treasury auction spurred recent demand for the metal.

The Dresdner Bank has in the past acted on hehalf of various Middle East Interests, and the market drew the inference that OPEC countries, their reserves boosted hy rising oil prices, had decided to make inroads into the gold market.

Summit solutions

AS EXPECTED, Premier Begin and President Sadat hit it nff nicely in Haifa yesterday, reaching agreement in a number if important issues, thus helping to "keep up the momentum." At the same time, also as expected, they failed to reach accord on some significant matters.

A settlement of the oil dispute between Israel and Egypt was clearly in the offing even before Mr. Sadat'e yacht eailed into Haifa port. It was patently in the works already when Energy Minister Moda'i, fresb from a visit with his Egyptian opposite number, Oil Minister Hillal, was openly advising the Government that it should delay Israel'e withdrawal from the Alma field unless it gnt its way on oil.

What Israel was asking for was 2 million tons annually, or the entire current output of the fields. Egypt, which is planning to reduce output, cnuntered by offering to sell Israel only 1.5m. tons. The half million ton gap has now been clused by President Sadat. His decision may be a minor contribution to fulfilling Israel's energy needs, but its psychological impact is apt to he coneiderable.

For his part, Mr. Begin agreed to return Mt. Sinai, and the Santa Katarina monastery, to Egypt before the November 25 date stipulated at Camp David. This should enable Mr. Sadat to celebrate the second anniversary of his journey to Jerusalem atop the mountain, as he has been hoping.

In return President Sadat approved the Israeli request for advancing the date of the complete opening up of the frontier. This should allow Israelis to make early visits to areas ceded back to Egypt.

Another matter that was easily resolved — "within five to ten minutes," according to Mr. Sadat - was the issue of the disappearing UNEF, a victim of the threatened Soviet veto. Without freeing the U.S. of its obligation to find a substitute in an alternative multinational force, the two leaders decided to take matters, for the time being, into their own hands.

In other words, supervision in Sinai will be handled not by UNTSO but by Israel and Egypt, working jointly. This is in fact the edutinn (which might prove beneficial in the long term as well) that was urged on both Mr. Begin and Mr. Sadat when the matter first arose, although it is not yet clear how this will work.

On the other hand little progress seeme to have been made on the autonomy. Thus Mr. Begin and Mr. Sadat agree to disagree on the participation of East Jerusalem Arabs in the elections: to the Egyptian President it is obvious that East Jerusalem is inciuded in the West Bank, to the Israeli Premier It ie just as obvious that it is part of united Jerusalem and thus of Israel itself.

Agreeing to disagree is a useful formula — up to a point. That point arises when decisinns must be taken. And decisions on how to translate the Camp David "framework" into a full-bodied autonomy will bave to be taken very econ.

This is because, even without any formal linkage, the fate of the autonomy, Mr. Begin'e own invention, will have a direct hearing on the future of the peace between Egypt and Israel. And on whether more Arah states do or do not join the peace process - so that the Washington treaty may be transformed into the comprehensive peace settlement to which the leaders of both Egypt and Israel paid such handsome tribute yesterday.

If the idea of the autonomy is suck not because of PLO sabotage but due to differences between Egypt and Israel then the great achievements of the past two years, manifested in the open camaraderie between 'my friend Prime Minister Begin" and "my good friend President Sadat" may yet be endangered.

...and confusions

ONE MAN in this country who is very much concerned with the fate of the autonomy is without a doubt Foreign Minister Dayan. Mr. Dayan resumed his activity in the ministerial committee on the autonomy last week, and immediately etarted a round of meetings with local Palestinian leaders - this, with the avowed alm of finding out what they think of the subject. Having first visited Dr. Haidar Abdel-Shafi in Gaza be went on, undeterred by the storm of criticism it raised, to confer with Dr. Ahmed Hamza Natshe in Hehron.

These two Arab physicians were recommended to Mr. Dayan by the Military Government to head the list (which has now apparently been closed, at least for a while) not because of the Foreign Minister's partiality for the medical profession. Their credentials as spokesmen for Paleetinian public opinion must have been their close association with the PLO. Mr. Dayan claims he did not know that Dr. Natshe ie a member (though only formally) of the PLO's Palestine National Council: which is rather odd. Perhaps he did not know, too, that the good doctor is also a leading West Bank communist.

But he surely must have known that both Dr. Natsbe and Dr. Abdui-Shafi are not merely PLO sympathizers but PLO activists — and that they were deemed by the authorities worthy of deportation (Dr. Abdul-Shafi twice) for their terrorist connection, before they were finally allowed back.

All this may not be reason enough to ignore them in eeeking to enlist local Palestinian support for the autonomy, or at least to discover whether such support might be forthcoming. But would it not be more iogical to drawout - and back up - those leaders of Palestinian opinion, and there are euch, who hate the PLO'a guts but lack the guts themselves to stand up to it?

And if it is argued that these do not really matter, can the Americans be faulted for wondering why they should not be allnwed nn their own tn sound the PLO out about its possible readiness to join the peace process, and never mind their 1975

After all, the nnly reason Dr. Natehe and Dr. Abdul-Shafi are not actual PLO operatives (unlike Mr. Terzi, the PLO'e man at the UN) ie because they would not, if they were, be bere, or in any case not in freedom. Perbaps, unknown to the Government itself, its policy on the Palestinians, and the PLO, is undergoing a slow change.

True. Mr. Begin refused this week even to hear a report by a Rumanian envoy of President Ceaucescu's meeting with Yasser Arafat. But yesterday, at his joint press conference with President Sadat, he spoke for the first time (even if unawares) in terms that recalled the Yariv-Shemtov PLO formula. This may conceivably have been due to Mr. Dayan.

It is arguable that this represents an inevitable change in the right direction, and that the alternative is a dead-end. But in the meantime there is much confusion.

AN INTERNATIONAL team of physicists bas found "strong" evidence of a new particle, the gluon, that holds together the centres of atoms like glue, AP reports.

Scientists at a physics symposium at the Fermi National Accelerator Lahoratory in Batavia, Illinois, presented the first direct evidence for the eiusive gluon particle, which was first predicted by theory about a decade ago.

Dr. Leon Lederman, director of the loboratory, said the finding gives kcy eupport to the current theory of the internal structure of neutrons, protons and other blis of matter once thought to be indivisible.

"Physicists are ecstatic," Lederman eaid. "We're beginning to understand how it's all put together." The experiments that uncovered the gluon were conducted this summer by more than 300 physicists from Israel, Germany, Japan, the U.S., England, Norway, France and China. They were working at a new nucicar accelerator in Hamburg.

THE HISTADRUT recently organized short eeminars in India and Srl Lanka despite the ebsence of diplomatic relations with the two Asian countries.

Some 80 people attended the twoweek seminars there, and another in Singapore, on waye to organize teenage workers and bow to deal with youngsters who do not work or study.

The courses were conducted by Avi Ofek who heads Hanoar Haoved Vehalomed's department for vocational schools.

The second in a series of articles examining the current state of Project Renewal

Promises, promises

'PROJECT RENEWAL is on the verge of total failure. It is being choked to death by bureaucracy. Unless the present decision-making structure is dismantled and replaced by something workable, the project will collapse, causing incalculable harm to the country." So saye Artsi Wein, director-general of the Ezra Ubizaron housing company owned hy the Tel Aviv municipality, who has been charged with running the project in several Tei Aviv neighbourhoods including the notorious Hatikva Quarter.

Hatikva bas become almost a 'modei" distressed neighbourhood. According to Wein, coach-loads of fundraisers are constantly touring the area, poking their noses into residents' houses, making them feel 'as if they were animals in a zoo."

Under the Project Renewai system of pairing neighbourhoods with diaspora communitiee, Hatikva was twinned with New York, indicating its symbolic importance for

With a population of 20,000 squeezed into its crowded alleys, Hatikva displaye all the symptoms of 'distress' Israeil style: a high crime rate, drugs, poor housing con-ditions, a low educational standard, a lack of welfare and youth facilities, dirt, decay and equalor.

But, according to Wein, when the project was launched, exact information on the neighbourhood was almost non-existent. His first act, therefore, was to appoint a research team under Dr. Avi Degani of Tel Aviv University's geography department to study the neighbourhood.

Degani's report is to be published in October, after which the detailed plan for the nelghbourhood's renewal will be formulated. In the meantime, a number of preliminary projects have been initiated.

'It was important to show the residents some results," says Wein. Rich Americans have been visiting ail the time and they and the residents expect action."

BUT THESE projects have all been trustrated by what Wein calls "a bureaucratic monster which would make Kafka sit up and take notice." He explains that he was instructed to eet up a local eteering committee to include representatives of all the ministrice and municipal departments involved plus come local residents. This committee is empowered to make recommendations to a higher committee in Jerusalem, chaired by Professors Shimshoni and Raphaeli. Decisions taken at a local level may be rejected by this higher committee, even though all the relevant bodies are represented at the local level.

By ALAN ELSNER

But in fact, Wein eays, the higher committee has made no decisions at all. It has simply ignored all the recommendations sent to it by the local steering committee.

At its isst meeting, beid on July 15, the steering committee passed a solution condemning the inaction of the higher committee.

"I'm totally stuck" eays Wein. "I can move neither forwards nor backwards. The residents here and the New York fundraisers are becoming etendily more sceptical and frustrated. We were better off without Project Renswal. Before, we were getting money from the municipality. Now we're not getting anything."

WEIN ALSO attacks the makeup of the steering committee as "unwisldy and incapable of efficient action. The minutes of its jast meeting show an attendance of 29 persons. With Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat in the chair, there also attended: representatives of the Ministries of Health, Education, Housing, Social Affairs and the Deputy Prime Minister's Office; three from the Jewish Agency; two from Keren Hayesod; two from the municipal education and welfare departments and one from its health department; the mayor's assistant; a member of the Tel Aviv University project; two from Ezra Ubizaron and eeven locals.

According to Avi Degani, the iocal representation is also a myth. "What you have there is lip eervice of the worst kind. Nobody really studied the situation to find out who the local leaders were. They received an instruction to include local people and took the first ones who came to hand - a self appointed group which does not represent the neighbourhood."

Degani eees local participation on a much wider ecale as a condition for success. He recommends several groupe being eet up to dieruse specific projects, teachers being in-volved in school projects, mothers in day-care projects and so on. "They would have a consultative role of the highest importance." he said.

In the meantime, Wein is trying to go ahead with money provided hy the. Housing Ministry and municipality, cutting out Project Renewal completely. He urges a massive devolution of authority with decision-making power being decentralized to the municipal level with the mayor — "the peoples' choice" —holding the reins. "Otherwise, this bureaucracy will strangle us for NEVE ISRAEL is a neighbourhood in Heraliya. There, according to Herzliya Mayor Yosef Nevo chairs the steering committee, the project is relatively advanced.

A plan in rebablistate the neighbourhood, financed by the Housing Ministry and municipality, got off the ground at the end of 1976, predating Project Renewal. So when Project Renewal was announced and Nevs Israel twinned with Boston, work was already under way. But the last two years have seen, in Nevo's word, "almost no progress."

The plan for the neighbourhood's renewal was approved by the higher committee eeveral months ago, Nevo explains. But then It transpired that the individual ministries involved and the Jewish Agency all wanted to approve the plan separately. 'Until they do so, we will receive no money. So far, we've been waiting for months," Nevo says.

The Housing Ministry did approve a budget. On this hasis, Nevo hired contractors and started work. "Then euddenly the minletry cut the hadget. We are standing at the edge of a voicano here. If we stop work, as we are about to do through lack of funds, this will cause great disappointment and cynicism among the residents," Nevo says.

Another problem is the effect of this on the Boston community. Nevo himself isunched last year'e campaign which raised $750,000 for Neve Israel in its first five days. But none of the money has reached the neighbourhood, even though the plans are ready and have been approved. "The money is all snarled up in the bureaucracy," Nevo complains.

One project was for a community centre. Boston UJA leaders wanted the cornerstone to be laid during the Prime Minister's Mission, so they could point to at least one achievement. But Nevo refused on the basis that the budget had not been ap-proved. "I can't lay a corneratone and then not build for months on end. What would the residents think of me?" he said.

IT TRANSPIRES that the community centre has to be approved again hy the higher committee, even though this same committee has already approved it once as a part of the general plan for the Nevo, liks Weln, calls for decentralization of power with more authority coming down to the local level. Alternatively, he would have mayors sit on the higher committee to give it a push, since they were "elected by the residents, live with them and are dependent on them."

Degani also calls for a change in the structure, giving more ecope to professionals, in commitation with the fundraisers and the residents. We have to find a structure that will work instead of a political com-promise." he said. "In renewal, it is not enough to do one's best. One must also succeed.

HOUSING AND THE JNF

Sir, - It is regrettable that Joan. Borsten began her series on housing in Jerusalem with an unwarranted attack on the Jewish National Fund for the rental of an apartment by its subsidiary, Hemnutah Ltd. If the story had been checked with us first, we would have been able to correct the many inaccuracies that were printed.

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

The rental of apartments, whether to new immigrants or others, is not one of the corporate purposes of JNF. If, occasionally, JNF or one of its subsidiariee receives property. then it must manage it in accordance with prevailing market conditions and in conformity with regulations and contractual provisions, using the income received to do the work with which it is charged, such as developing lands in the Negev, the Arava and the Galllee. Indeed, were JNF to act differently, it would then be at

Concerning the apartment in question. JNF devoted considerable time and effort to accommodate Mr. Bacharach in view of his self-declared status as a new immigrant from the United States, about to be married. If, as it appears, he misled us in regard to his marriage, this can only cast doubt on other statements he made that were printed in your article. Mr. Bacharache had sufficient means to offer to purchase the apartment from JNF and, in the end, agreed rather to rent it for a year. This rental was paid in advance at his own request instead of resorting to the more common payments to the dollar or to the costof-living index.

. Finally, it is noteworthy that the rent charged for this apartment is rather low within the context of the present housing market.

Joan Borsteo comments: Perhaps it is wrong to believe that the JNF ehould set an example to other iandlords and not give its blessing to their greedy demands. But the more Jerusalem landlords ask a year's rent in advance, link the rent, and overcharge, the more Israelis and olim will not have homes of their own and will leave the city and the country. If the JNF is selling the flat next year, why didn't they sell it now to Bacharach? Why didn't they answer his letters? Why all the bureaucracy?

Sir, - Ambassador Andrew Young is the fall guy for the Carter Administration's deliberate shift to the PLO. President Carter has been signalling this shift for the past two years, a shift which has legitimized the PLO - the modern incarnation of the Nazi spirit - thereby increasing tension throughout the world.

Andy Young was man enough to teil the wboic truth. Is Jimmy Carter, who promised that be would never lie, teiling the whole truth? Is this another Watergate-type

Indeed as one who was very much involved in the civil rights move-ment, I find it especially shameful that the Carter Administration's ecapegoat was a Black leader. Tragically, President Carter may be responsible for exacerbating tension between the Jewish and Black communities who bave suffered enough and fought side by side against prejudice.
